1	I have no idea	3/31/2014 8:54 PM
2	I am very aware of the role, but I am concerned that the rest of the college community is not actively seeking out student participation. Rather, it is a formality and not a substantive part of the governing process.	3/31/2014 2:20 PM
3	I am aware of shared governing model that includes students	3/28/2014 5:09 PM

4	Many many of the processes at CCC are inefficient, and use precious faculty time for tasks that should be the job of administrators. This robs students of faculty attention. Faculty only have so many hours in the day to devote to work. More efficient systems (and I DO understand the need for accountability) would go a long way towards making teaching effective. This is a leadership issue.	3/28/2014 5:44 PM

CCC College Survey SP2014- Governance Awareness

6	The administration tends to pack all meetings with so much one-sided information that there is generally no time for any questions or comments that would allow us to go in depth and analyze issues. It only creates the illusion that information is shared [thus, 'shared governance'], however, this is not true shared governance. We need more time and value given to the faculty voice in making decisions.	3/27/2014 3:28 PM
7	I do believe that is the desire of the administration	3/26/2014 11:55 PM

1	we are not given time to partake	3/31/2014 2:35 PM
2	To me this question is asking about vision and how to carry that out. I do not see our campus meeting our students where they are and I do not see faculty actively seeking professional development opportunities in strategies to support our population. Management could do 100% better in facilitating this discussion.	3/31/2014 2:20 PM
3	Processes are cumbersome and designed by management only	3/30/2014 11:23 AM
4	Often, institutional goals seem to come from the "top down". The classified and staff have valuable input that should be used in making goals. Also, faculty and staff will be able to function more effectively in meeting those goals if they are part of formulating them.	3/28/2014 5:44 PM

In addition, my email address was left of of many campus-wide lists for the first 5 years of my employment, and how would I have known I was missing anything?
