1	getting more people involved. Provide an incentive for more people to volunteer their time. Perhaps give some FLEX credit for all the time given.	2/10/2014 7:33 PM
2	Not having shared governance when members of a committee are not subject experts, e.g. for Program Review. Also, provide necessary research in a more timely and understandable way when faculty must use it to continually justify programs, courses, and budget requests.	2/10/2014 5:58 PM
3	The utilization of social media	2/10/2014 11:43 AM
4	Better communication and more focus on the teaching.	2/7/2014 12:04 PM
5	I think my major complaint about the shared governance process is that managers develop the agenda (no problem here as this is part of their job) and have thought a lot about it before the rest of us are involved, yet we are expected to process and participate in decisions without adequate time to ruminate. Off topic, I think this survey would be more useful if a "neutral" response was included, as some of my "disagrees" are really more neutral responses.	2/7/2014 10:31 AM

10	I don't like this survey, should have another option (ambivalent)	2/4/2014 5:08 PM
11	Efforts to identify and correct instances of inefficient faculty, management and classified time. Administrative systems should support the provision of service to students, and aspects of administration which take time away from that effort should be minimized. Shared governance is poor at addressing issues like these.	2/4/2014 4:52 PM
12	I see a lot of top-down decision making that I don't always see as shared governance.	2/4/2014 7:14 AM
13	not packing meetings with higher administration with information to the point where there is no opportunity to ask questions and look at issues more deeply. In the absence of time and openness to truly shared governance, these meetings are merely forums for transmission of decisions already made and missed opportunities for real collaboration between faculty and administration.	2/3/2014 9:04 PM
14	More efficient administrative processes with clearer guides and instructions.	2/3/2014 4:12 PM
15	If faculty had more time to attend to governance matters.	2/3/2014 3:39 PM
16	Addressing the above said statements and questions.	2/3/2014 3:35 PM
17	There seems to be very little interest at the very top of our administration to listen to/work with faculty. She's very "top down" and unwelcoming.	2/3/2014 3:33 PM
18	Standardized communication, open dialog, full transparency	2/3/2014 3:01 PM
